Chorus-Then smoke away till a golden ray Lights up the dawn of the morrow, For a cheerful eigar, like a shield will bear The bllows of care and sorrow.

The leuf burns bright, like gems of light That flash in the braids of beauty, It nerves each heart for the hero's part On the battle-plain of duty. Then smoke away, &c.

In the thoughtful gloom of his darkened room Sits the child of song and story, But his heart is light, for his pipe beams brigh And his dreams are all of glory. Then smoke away, &c.

By the blazing fire sits grey-haired sire, And infant arms surround him, And he smiles on all in that quiant old hall, While the smoke-curls float around him. Then smoke away, &c.

In the forest grand of our native land, When the savage conflict's ended, The pipe of peace brought a sweet release From toil and terror blended. Then smoke away, &c.

The dark eyed train of the maids of Spain 'Neath their arbor-shades trip lightly, And a gleaming eigar, like a new-born star, In the clasp of their lips burn brightly. Then smoke away, &c.

It warms the soul, like the blushing bowl. With its rose-bed burden streaming, It drowns it in bliss, like the first warm kiss From the lips with the love-buds teeming. Then smoke away, till the golden ray Lights up the dawn of the morrow, For a cheerful eigar, like a shield will bear, The blows of care and sorrow

Miscellaneous.

A Tall Singer, or the Power of Music. We were seated in the cabin of a river steamboat. There was a large number of passengers, who seemed desirous of beguiling away the tedium of the trip by contributing something to the general amusement.

Among the passengers was one long, lank specimen whom no one could fail to recognize as a Yankee. He sat apart from the rest, notwithstanding, while the singularity of his appearance did not fail to draw many curious eyes towards him.

At length, when all the resources of the company seemed exhausted, one of them turned dubiously to our Yankee, and politely requested him to favor the company with a

"A song !" echoed he, looking up. "Yes, sir, you sing, do you not?" "I did once," replied he; "and I may add, it saved my life."

"Saved your life!" All were eager to hear how this could be. and after some little urging, the stranger consented to gratify them.

"You must know," said he one of the first to go to California when the report first reached us at home of its stores of gold. It was nothing to what it is now -a perfect waste in fact, with hardly a mark of civil zation, where now you can see flourishing towns numbering their thousands of inhabitants."

"Being fond of adventure, I separated from my company, and determined to find my way to the diggings myself. One night I found myself lying on the grass, with my pack for my pillow, just on the edge of a large forest. It did not enter my head to be afraid until it became somewhat dark, and I heard with fearful distinctness the cry of the prairie wolf. I listened again, and was alarmed to find the cry coming nearer. Evidently they scented me."

"At length a whole pack of blood-thirsty rascals came bounding on till they came within a hundred yards of me, and then stood stock still, and soon began to draw "My hair rose on end. I was terribly alarmed; I endeavored to think of some possible way of scaring them. Having heard that they were terrified by fire, I slighted a match. They drew off a little, but immediately retraced their steps. This movement was repeated on both sides. I found this would never do; I must think of something more decisive. But what?

"I recollected having in my youth attended a singing school for the space of two evenings, during which I received some indistinct notions of the manner of singing "Old Hundred." That recollection saved

"Without more ado, I began, and did as well as I could. By the time I had got thro' the tirst line, I observed the wolves began to look a little wild an uneasy, and-will you believe it, gentlemen?" said the narrator earnestly-" before I finished, every individual wolf, putting his fore paws up to his ears, scampered away as if old Jack was after

A shout of laughter both loud and long, followed this narrative, at the end of which the speaker, who had not stirred a muscle. gravely continued:

"You see, gentlemen, I have been frank with you; I did not wish to take advantage of your very kind and complimentary invitation without forewarning you of the consequence. If, after what I have told you, you are still desirous of hearing me, I will endeavor to give you "Old Hundred," which is the only song I know, and to which, for reasons already given, I feel uncommonly attached."

After that story, he was unanimously excused. A MOTHER.-Who can look coldly upon a mother? Who, after the unspeakable tenderness and care with which she has fostered him through infancy, guided him through childhood, and deliberated with him through the perplexities of opening manhood, can speak irreverently of a mother? Her claims to the affections of her offspring are founded in nature, and cold must be the heart that can deny them. Over the grave of a friend. of a brother or a sister I would plant the primrose, for it is emblematical of youth, but over that of a mother I would let the green grass shoot up unmolested, for there is some-thing in the simple covering which nature spreads upon the grave, that well-becomes the abiding place of decaying age.

A LADY rose from obscurity to great wealth by the successful speculations of her husband, is reported to be in the babit of misapplying words and quotations very strangely. Her last motto is-" When you are at Rome, do as the Romans do; and when you are in Turkey, do as the Turkeys do !" | Nov 9

Co-Operation of the wife.-No man ever prospered in the world without the cooperation of his wife. If she unites in mutual endeavors, or rewards his labors with an endearing smile, with what confidence will he resort, to his merchandise or his farm, fly over lands, sail upon seas, meet difficulty and encounter danger, if he knows that he is not spending his strength in vain, but that his labor will be rewarded by the sweets of home. Solicitude and disappointment enter the history of every man's life, and he is but half provided for his voyage who finds but an associate for happy hours, while for his months of darkness and distress no sympathising partner is prepared. THERE is a sacredness in tears. They are not the mark of weakness, but of power! They speak more eloquently than ten thousand tongues. They are the messengers of overwhelming grief, of deep contrition, and unspeakable love.

How melancholy the moon must feel when it has enjoyed the fullness of prosperity, and got reduced to its " last quarter."

TRUE PHILOSOPHY.—One great secret of domestic enjoyment is too much overlooked. It lies in bringing our wants down to circumstances, instead of toiling to bring circumstances on to our wants. Wants will always be ahead of means, and there will be no end to the race if you set the latter chasing the former. Put the voke of selfdenial on desire, apply the spur of Industry to energy, and then if the latter does not overtake the former it will at least come in sight of it.

A now will obtain contentment from almost anything. From two clam-shells and a dead kitten, Master Smith extracts more fun than his father can derive from eighteen visits to the Hippodrome. Great invention this boyhood.

"I MEANT to have told you of that hole, said a man to his d, who had stumbled into a pit full of water a few days since. "No matter now-no matter now!" said the other, blowing the mud and water out of his mouth, " Ive found it out."

Nor long ago some friends called upon a wit, recently deceased, and upon taking leave, one remarked, "Well Dick, may God bless you." "I'm d——d if he don't," was the seemingly blasphemous, but really witty and appropriate reply.

A CITY BOY was asked why he preferred o board at an extensive hotel and give dinner parties, instead of living at home, gave his excuse that Pa and Ma had got to be so sassy that he could not stand it no longer, so he had to quit 'em.

ABSENCE OF MIND .- The following is the last instance of absence of mind.

A man, thinking he was at home a few evenings since, laid down in the park and put his boots outside the gate to be blacked

IN BAKER COUNTY, GA. THE well known Oak and Hickory Cotton Plan-1. tation, called Greenwood, situated on the Coolawahee Swamp, six miles west of Albany, Baker County, (now Dougherty.) Said Plantation con-tains 1500 acres of the very best land in said county, most of which is cleared, with extensive improvements on it, in perfect order. My usual crop is about 200 bales, of 500 pounds each, with 27 hands. Twenty young Mules, about eight thousand bushels Corn, and the Stock of Hogs and Cattle, will be sold with the place. Said Plantation has proven very healthy. I will reserve one lot of two hundred and fifty acres if the purchaser does not object. The fertility and never-failing qualities of Baker County lands, together with the exemption, in a great measure, from the Boll Worm and Caterpiller, being so well known, renders it useless to enumerate the many advantages they possess over any cotton lands in this State or elsewhere. My only reason for selling, is to concentrate my planting interests, and to bring my negroes nearer to my place of residence and business. Terms easy to the pur-

Pills, Ointments, &c., &c., are put up under his own supervision and in strict accordance with the United States Dispensatory.

From his long and extensive experience, in the practice of Medicine, he has made several Compounds of his own, not to be found in the Dispensatory, viz:—A Preparation for the CROUP, which he has used extensively for eighteen years, and recommends with confidence; a VERMIFUGE, safe and efficient; and many other Compounds which he makes extemporaneously to fulfil the indications in each particular case for which it is used.

It would require more space than could be obtained in a Newspaper to give a Catalogue of the Drugs, Medicines and Chemicals kept and sold by him—suffice it to say, he can furnish a Physician's Office COMPLITE, with Physick and Furniture.

He has added to his former Stock some of the most reliable Vegetable extracts, viz: PODOPHILL LIN, STILLINGINE, LEPTANDRIN, &c.
